

Protective Services Group Recruitment guide

Recruitment guide

The Protective Services Group (PSG) is an operational unit of the Security and Counter-Terrorism Command, providing efficient, effective, and ethical security services to Queensland Government clients across the state.

Services provided include:

- Static guarding
- Mobile patrols
- Alarm monitoring
- Building services coordinators
- Security consultancy
- Security risk assessments
- Technical services
- Government identification cards.

In accordance with the Service's commitment to Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO), applications are encouraged from:

- People of First Nations backgrounds
- Women
- People with disabilities
- People from non-English speaking backgrounds.

What are the benefits from working with Protective Services Group/QPS?

- Opportunity for career mobility
- Salary sacrifice arrangements
- Comprehensive health, welfare and career support services
- Leave assistance for study
- Opportunity for career development
- Study and Research Assistance Scheme (SARAS).

Work for us

PSG offers a diverse range of career opportunities and working arrangements throughout Queensland. It is a rewarding career with job security and ample opportunity for career development.

Protective security officer recruits complete a comprehensive training program at the Queensland Police Service Academy which covers operation skills and tactics training; security legislation; and organisational policies and procedures.

Once a member of PSG, there are opportunities to undertake further training and other professional development courses to progress and enhance your career in areas such as technical skills; leadership and management.

Find out more about Protective Services Group:

To apply visit the website or scan the QR code.

www.protectiveservices.qld.gov.au/